

Rechal Ainembabazi

The project aimed at addressing the significant gap in university admissions counseling for students in Kyankwanzi District, Uganda, exacerbated by the shift to online applications. The project, spearheaded by the district's sole admissions counselor, Reachal Ainembabazi, involved collaboration with fellow counselors from across the country to assist 1,700 students with their local and overseas university applications, focusing on underserved areas. The initiative, supported by financial contributions from the International Association for College Admissions Counseling and other donors, demonstrated the importance of collective effort in overcoming educational barriers, achieving its primary objective of aiding students in the online university application process.
